Temporal Reckoning

As an action, you collapse past, present, and future onto a single creature within 60 feet. Every attack it has made since the start of combat is reflected back at it simultaneously. The target takes 2d6 force damage for each attack roll it has made during this combat (Wisdom saving throw halves). Maximum 20d6.

Usage: 1/Long Rest.

18th Level Techniques

Requires 18th level of Chronomancer attunement.

Temporal Dominion

For 1 minute, you become the master of time itself. You take three turns each round; all creatures and effects not of your choosing are slowed (speed halved, disadvantage on attacks and Dexterity saves); and you can instantly end any effect on yourself as a free action once per turn.

Usage: 1/Long Rest.

Chrono Collapse

As an action, you collapse time in a 60-foot radius, forcing all creatures to simultaneously experience every moment of their life at once. All creatures must succeed on a Wisdom saving throw or take 8d12 psychic damage and be stunned for 1 minute (repeated saves). On a success, half damage only.

Usage: 1/Long Rest.

Time's End

As an action, you stop time for all creatures except yourself for 1 minute (as a true time stop, not just a 1-round version). During this minute, you can take up to 10 turns uninterrupted. You cannot deal damage directly during this time, but you can set up conditions, move creatures, position objects, and activate any other techniques or non-damaging features.

Usage: 1/Long Rest.

The Timekeeper

As an action, you declare a fixed point in time. For the next hour, you can, as a bonus action on any subsequent turn, reset the battlefield to this fixed point: all creatures return to their HP, positions, and conditions they had at the time of declaration. You retain all actions and charges spent since then. This can be used once per declared fixed point.

Usage: 1/Long Rest.

Undying Timeline

When you die, you do not. Instead, you rewind to the moment 1 minute before you died, fully restored to the HP you had at that time, with full knowledge of what happened. The timeline re-runs, but you retain your memories and may act differently. Once used, this feature cannot be used again for 7 days.

Usage: 1/7 days.
